ADVISORS CAPITAL MANAGEMENT, LLC CHIEF INVESTMENT OFFICER
TO ATTEND THE FEDERAL RESERVE BANK OF BOSTON'S 53rd
ECONOMIC CONFERENCE

April 8, 2008 (Paramus, NJ) – Advisors Capital Management, LLC (ACM) a private account money manager is pleased to announce that its Chief Investment Officer, Dr. Charles Lieberman, has been invited to attend the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston's 53rd Economic Conference.

Dr. Lieberman along with world and domestic bank presidents, academics, Federal Reserve staff, and chief economists from across the country, will travel to Chatham, MA on June 9th for this three day conference that will primarily focus on "Understanding Inflation and the Implications for Monetary Policy". Topics to be discussed include:

- Forecasting Inflation
- The Labor Market and the Phillips Curve
- Inflation Expectations
- Evidence on Price Determination

Presenters at this event include the President and CEO of the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston, Eric Rosengren, as well as various economists, professors, and Directors from the Center for Retirement Research at Boston College.

When asked why he believes it is important to attend the conference, Dr. Lieberman replied, "It is important to stay in touch with academic research especially on issues that are very important in evaluating prevailing market conditions. Current concern over inflation may be inappropriate in view of today's weak economy." ACM will try to exploit Lieberman's macro economic expertise when determining which industries and individual companies should provide good value to its investors.
